Guys, as nice as the "Slytherin friend protects the Hufflepuff" headcanons are, think of the other way around for a moment!

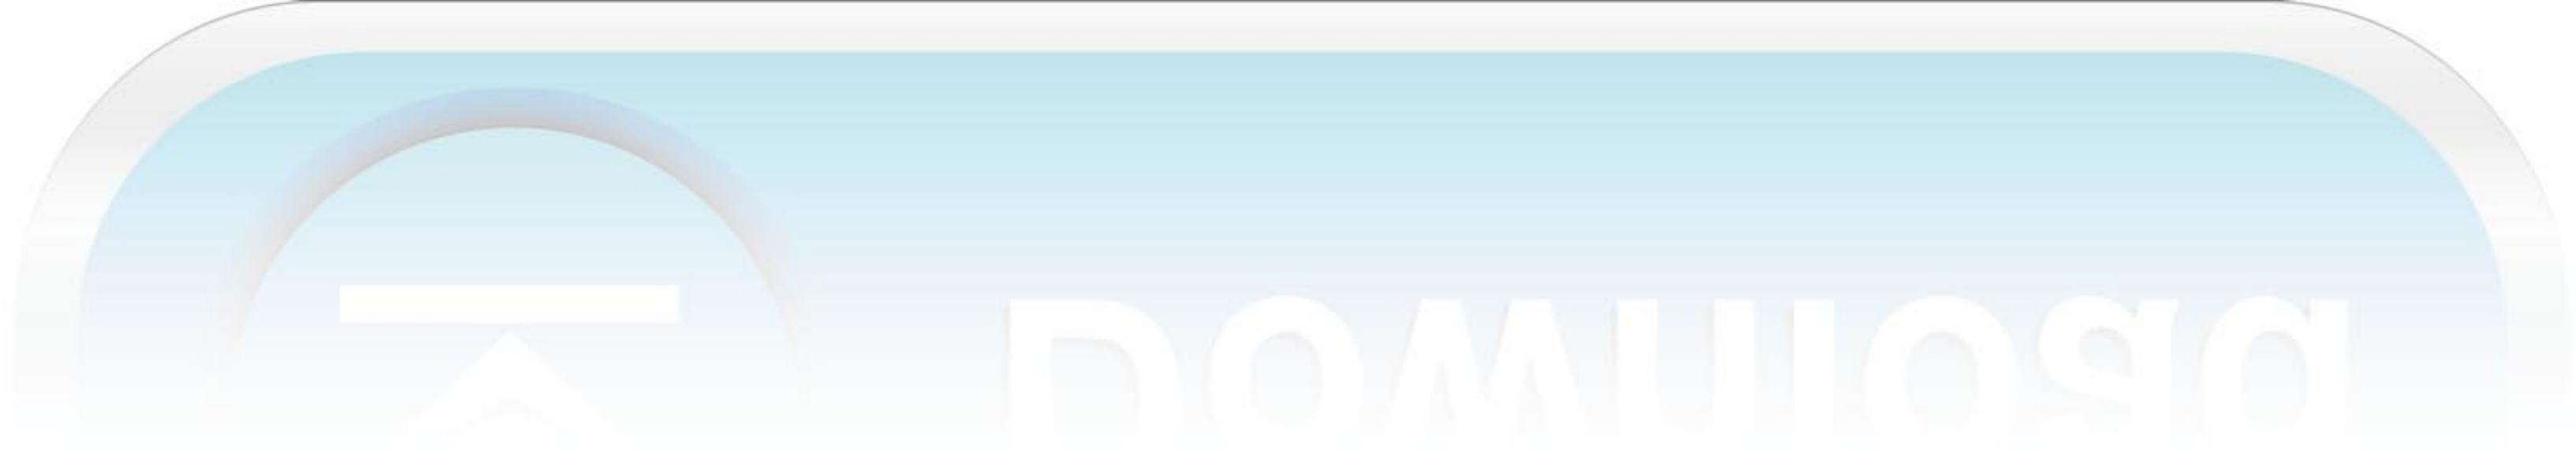

- Slytherins feeling bad about their parents' bigoted ways and the Hufflepuffs reminding them again and again that they're right and their parents are wrong
- Hufflepuffs standing up for their Slytherin friends when the other two houses are being rude and so they shout about how the others should stand back
- Slytherin kids being content to hold their heads high and take the hate with a cold smile and their Hufflepuff buddies being unable to handle that so they prank the other houses
- Hufflepuffs ganging up to protect the young Slytherin kids when the older house members aren't there
- Hufflepuffs hugging the cold and aloof Slytherins
- Slytherin kids having to hold back their badger buddies because once they're mad over bullies they are mad and will kill to protect the Slytherins
- Slytherin students wearing Hufflepuff scarves because they forgot their own and their friends had extras
